The river rises!

After beautiful weather over the Bluebonnet Festival weekend, heavy rainfall in the Llano River basin turned the already healthy flow into a raging torrent, reported on Tuesday to be sending almost 5,000 cubic feet per second downstream from Llano. This photo was taken at the Kingsland Slab around 2:10 p.m. on Tuesday, as a brief downpour was ending; by Wednesday morning the water was down a couple of feet, but the Slab Road was still closed to traffic. More rain is predicted for next week.

Last Friday, I was telling some of my friends that I just might die of exhaustion sometime Saturday evening. It didn’t happen; I had a wonderful weekend, including a visit from my daughter and son-in-law from Baton Rouge, who wanted to “see the Bluebonnet Festival” and eat at Cooper’s. We accomplished those missions, and they graciously allowed me to stop along the way and take pictures of some area events. I missed some, of course, but I got a lot more pictures than I can fit in this paper. If you have the opportunity, please look at my “Highland Lakes Weekly” Facebook page.

One of the reasons I got so tired last week was that Marble Falls keeps growing and making changes. I finished last week’s paper around 8 a.m. but instead of getting my usual four hours of sleep before starting deliveries, I had to attend the Grand Opening at the beautiful new Bests store. The next morning, I had to start my Friday deliveries early so I could attend the Ground-Breaking for the new H.E.B. Both those stores represent huge upgrades for area shoppers.

Then there was the Bluebonnet Festival’s Pet Parade and three Friday night concerts that I couldn’t miss before my guests arrived around 1 a.m. It was well after 2 a.m. before I got to sleep, and Saturday started quite early. I pared down my Saturday itinerary, attended the afternoon show of the Llano Country Opry, and was able to get a short nap while my guests went swimming at the Slab, before heading off to the street dance in Burnet.

Swimming at the Slab was not an option a few days later. Kingsland got some rain on Monday and Tuesday, but apparently there was a lot more to our west. The Slab Road will probably be open again by the time you read this, but it was covered by three feet of raging water on Tuesday morning (see front page photo).

Kingsland’s changes are a bit smaller than those in Marble Falls, but there has been a recent proliferation of upscale homes around the lake. I plan to include one photo in this week’s paper from the weekend’s “Lakefront Home Tour” by Lake LBJ Partners (see ad on page 9 and the “Rest of the Weekend” album on Facebook). I also hope to include a picture of the old Highland Lakes Shopping Center, where demolition will reportedly begin on Monday, April 24.

Another recent addition to the Kingsland community is the new charter school. It will be holding a “Lake Fest” Open House, with all kinds of activities from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 22 (see ad on page 10). One of the highlights will be a 10:30 a.m. performance by the Burnet Gunfighters.

One thing I didn’t get around to was compiling a list of all the Easter activities. I am positive that there are Easter Egg Hunts and Sunrise Services not mentioned in this paper (but this Saturday is the day for the Marble Falls Children’s Day, which is better than an Easter Egg Hunt, anyway; see ad on page 10 for details).

The Lake Buchanan Conservation Corp (LBCC) asked me to mention that Marcus DeJesus, fisheries biologist with Texas Parks and Wildlife, will be the guest speaker at an April 18 LBCC meeting (7 p.m. at Hill Country Hall, on Hwy 29 in Buchanan Dam). He will talk about past, present and future development of Lake Buchanan and Inks Lake as concerns sport fish production; the public is invited to attend.

The Falls on the Colorado Museum needs two key items to complete upcoming historical exhibits. If you have a WWI Navy uniform or a vintage wood stove that you’d be willing to lend, please call Charles Watkins at 830-201-4006. The Friends of the Marble Falls Library are holding a poster contest as part of a week-long celebration this October to mark 20 years in its current location. All local area children are encouraged to enter a “Library Love” poster. Cash prizes will be awarded for each age group. Entry forms and info will be available at schools and at The Marble Falls Library.

All entries are due by May 15.

Dr. Sara Lindley, doing a dental exam in the photo above, was one of the local volunteers who worked with Jen Banton’s S.M.A.R.T Smiles organization to screen dozens of students at Pecksaddle Elementary School in Kingsland last Friday. The group, “Saving, Maintaining And Retaining Their SMILES,” provides under-served students with preventive dental care, a positive dental environment, and a referral service for dental treatment.

Volunteers from Kingsland’s U-Too Ministries held a BBQ fundraiser at the Granite-D Bar in Liano last Saturday to help supply Bibles for the children of prison inmates. U-Too is probably best known for the free meals it offers to all takers each Wednesday evening from its Hwy 1431 location in Kingsland (next to ReMax Real Estate).

Guest speaker Sara Gredler and President Shirley Shaw smiled for the camera at Tuesday’s meeting of the Kingsland Genealogical Society, held at the Kingsland Library. The subject of the program was DNA, and its many possibilities in tracing ancestors.

Signs of activity at the now-empty Highland Lakes Shopping Center indicate that the longtime Kingsland landmark is nearing its end. Latest reports say that demolition is scheduled to begin on Monday, April 24. The front wall, with its iconic Highland Lakes map, will be preserved and incorporated into the new Prosperity Bank office to be built on the site.

A spectacular new home by Brother Sun Builders (at The Harbors, on the Burnet County side of Kingsland) is one of the stops on the Builders Waterfront Home Tour, held by Lake LBJ Partners each weekend in April (see ad on page 9).

Volunteers R.G. Floyd, Richard Maddern, Mike Sandovar, Roy Keely, Jane Hallowell, Tracy Schienemen, Melissa Eddy and Glenda Floyd helped the Keep Kingsland Beautiful organization participate in the “Great American Cleanup” by picking up trash along Skyline Drive in Kingsland last Saturday morning.

Bluebonnet Festival

Pet Parade winners, on the Burnet square last Friday evening

Runners begin a 10K Race early Saturday morning at Burnet's huge Bluebonnet Festival.

Saturday morning Kids Activities included a foot race (above) and an Egg Race (below: complicated by the wind, but very entertaining nonetheless) before the Grand Parade and all the afternoon fun.

One of the highlights of Burnet's Bluebonnet Festival last weekend was the demonstration of horsemanship and weapons skills by this mounted unit of the 1st Cavalry Division, based at Fort Hood.

Well-trained horses and riders delighted the crowd at Wallace Riddell Park shortly after the Grand Parade on Saturday, demonstrating skills and tactics from the late 1800s, when the cavalry patrolled the western frontier.

These two “mule-skinners” put their supply wagon team through its paces as part of the 1st Cav’s demonstration at Wallace Riddell Park in Burnet last Saturday.
Perennial favorites at area parades, the Hill Country Plungettes were one of many enthusiastic groups in the Grand Parade in Burnet’s wonderful Bluebonnet Festival last Saturday morning. Large crowds gathered in downtown Burnet for the event, especially at the parade and at the street dance that evening.

This “float” in the Bluebonnet Festival parade, from DNJ Septic and Construction in Kingsland, later served as one of the contestants in the Demolition Derby that evening.

Sam Riggs, an acclaimed country rocker who came to Austin from Florida in 2007, headlined the great lineup of musicians who entertained the crowds at Burnet’s Bluebonnet Festival last weekend.

The store is nearly twice as big as its former location; two separate retail spaces are nearing completion on the north side of the building.

County Judge James Oakley cut a ribbon on Tuesday to celebrate the opening of a new DPS Driver License Office at 1405A Mormon Mill Road in Marble Falls. The office is set up to provide streamlined service for the whole county; both former locations have been closed.

The Llano Country Opry last Saturday featured tributes to George Jones, Tammy Wynette and Conway Twitty by Georgette Jones (daughter of the famous couple) and Tre Twitty (grandson of Conway). One of the highlights was when Tre Twitty invited audience members named Linda to join him on the stage to sing his grandfather’s hit “Linda on My Mind.” The Grand Finale was their duet of the Bette Midler song, “The Rose,” which was also a hit for Conway Twitty.

Above: World-famous singer-songwriter Suzy Bogguss was the featured artist at a Spicewood Arts Society concert last Friday evening at the Spicewood Vineyards Event Center.

Left: Local celebrity Pauline Reese made an appearance at Brass Hall in Marble Falls, also on Friday evening.
